

For my project I will be transforming images into a dreamscape. I intend to create a sort of ocean in the sky, with whales and jellyfish swimming through the galaxy, starfish stars glowing and shooting past. Also strange things, like books flapping by to give it an extra "dream" sense. I plan for the background to be in motion as well, hopefully using the technique learned with blender composition. The creatures and objects in the motion project will be animated with adobe after effects. I have an idea of where I want to go with this, however I don't want to fully plan and storyboard it, as I find that my best ideas happen in the middle of creation, so I want to leave room for spontaneity.
